This week I didn't create anything new for the class project but I think that I was helpful in working through some of the problems that the development team had. We talked through the map and different ways it could be displayed and different ways that the app could be simplified and I think we're just waiting on the bones of the app to be finished so we can start polishing it up. I think that this week I will start working on a new design of the map that's in line with what we talked about in class last week.